Abbeville	SW	CRT	Henry County Courthouse	101 Courthouse Square
Abbeville	SE	100	Huggin' Molly	129 Kirkland Street. Huggin' Molly is in beautiful downtown Abbeville. It is a large old fashioned drug store with the soda fountain counter at the front, where ice cream goodies and cherry cokes are assembled. The place is loaded with items such as brochures and memorabilia from the 40's and 50's. It has a beautiful pharmacy "front" at the rear of the front entrance, which is a beautiful wood decoration; reminds me of a fancy British pub. There is separate seating area to accommodate lots of patrons. Great music from the era is played.
Abbeville	SW	POI	Old Sinclair Station	310 Kirkland Street. Beautifully restored Sinclair service station.
Abbeville	SW	POI	The 1840 Bethune-Kennedy House	302 Kirkland Street. This rare, dual front door, double pen Creole cottage was constructed circa 1840 on the military three-notch road, now Kirkland Street. It is the oldest remaining structure in Abbeville. Earliest known owner was Confederate Colonel William Calvin Bethune, M.D. Last owner-dweller was Mollie Kennedy. To avoid immediate demolition, it was

Alexander City	C	POI	Horseshoe Bend National Military Park	11288 Horseshoe Bend Rd (Alabama 49). 18 miles east of Alexander City on Alabama 49. On the morning of 27 March, 1814 General Andrew Jackson and an army of 3,300 men consisting of Tennessee militia, United States regulars and both Cherokee and Lower Creek allies attacked Chief Manawa and 1,000 Upper Creek or Red Stick warriors fortified in the "horseshoe" bend of the Tallapoosa River. To seal off the bend of the river, the Upper Creeks built an incredibly strong 400 yard long barricade made of dirt and logs. As the Cherokee and Lower Creek warriors swam the Tallapoosa and attacked from the rear, Jackson launched the militia and regular soldiers against the barricade. Facing overwhelming odds, the Red Sticks fought bravely yet ultimately lost the battle. Over 800 Upper Creeks died at Horseshoe Bend defending their homeland. This was the final battle of the Creek War of 1813-14, which is considered part of the War of 1812. In a peace treaty signed at Ft. Jackson (near Wetumpka) after the battle, both the Upper and Lower Creeks were forced to give the United States nearly 20 million acres of land in what is today Alabama and Georgia. The victory here brought Andrew Jackson national attention and helped him to be elected the seventh President of the United States in 1828. This 2,040-acre park preserves the site of the battle. The land ceded by the Creek Indian nation made up three fifths of the land that was to become Alabama. The visitor center has an excellent 20 minute video and exhibits on the battle & Creek Indian culture. The Horseshoe Bend National Military Park is a must see.

Birmingham	C	100	Pete's Famous Hot Dogs (1915)	1925 2nd Ave. North. "All the way" dog. "Birmingham legend, Gus Koutroulakis, has been slinging hot dogs from the same tiny stand in downtown Birmingham, Pete's Famous, since 1948. According to Gus, his Uncle Pete and a buddy bought the place in 1939 with money they won in a Pinochle game. Pete renamed the place after his self- proclaimed famous dogs when he bought out his business partner in 1946. That same year, Pete installed the colorful neon sign that still lights up 2nd Avenue. And Gus still makes his dogs the same way his uncle did: "all the way" with mustard, kraut, and special sauce. Or, you can order a "special," with a beef topping that's—be careful—not chili. The classic sauce is unique to Birmingham and certainly a Greek addition to classic take- away fare. A visit to Pete's Famous is quite an experience, so when you visit, spend some time taking in Gus's hot dog wisdom and learning interesting tidbits from loyal customers, while downing a few of what are arguably the most famous dogs in Birmingham. The record, by the way, is eighteen hot dogs eaten in one visit."

Birmingham	C	POI	Rickwood Field	1137 2nd Ave W. Built in 1910 by Birmingham industrialist Rick Woodward for the Birmingham Coal Barons. Rickwood Field was modeled after Pittsburgh's Forbes Field and Connie Mack designed the field dimensions. Opening Day was on August 18, 1910 at 3:30 p.m. The Barons defeated the Montgomery Climbers 3-2 before more than 10,000 fans. The Barons played at Rickwood Field until 1987, when they moved into the suburban Hoover Metropolitan Stadium. The famous Black Barons of the Negro Leagues also called Rickwood home during their existence. The legendary Willie Mays, who grew up minutes away, was a 16-year old center-fielder on the 1948 championship squad. The Black Barons played their home games at Rickwood when the (White) Barons were out of town. Championship pennants from both teams are painted on the exterior of the ballpark behind the third base grandstand. The 1983 Barons were the last Rickwood tenants to celebrate a championship when they won the Southern League that year

Birmingham Bessemer	C	POI	Tannehill Historic State Park	12632 Confederate Pkwy. Nature has blessed Tannehill. The beautiful tree-lined valley, hillsides rich in ore and swiftly flowing Roupes Creek made this a perfect setting for a successful iron making operation, as the early settlers realized. The same ingredients afford today's visitors a pleasurable escape from modern life. Tannehill Ironworks Historical State Park has more than 1,500 acres in three counties set aside for hiking, camping and outdoor recreation. A miniature railroad chugs through the pines. From spring through fall, the blacksmith, miller and craftsmen demonstrate their trades. Craft shops occupy restored pioneer cabins and artisans chat with visitors from their front porches. The cotton gin, pioneer farm and working gristmill preserve a long-gone way of life. Artifacts of Alabama's 19th century iron industry displayed in the Iron and Steel Museum put in perspective the massive stone furnaces, Tannehill's awe-inspiring centerpiece.
Birmingham Bessemer	C	100	The Bright Star	304 19th St. Alabama's Oldest Restaurant. In 1907, a small cafe with only a horseshoe-shaped bar opened its doors to the bustling community of Bessemer, Alabama. Outgrowing three locations, the Bright Star moved to its present site in 1914, and patrons were introduced to a new dining atmosphere. Ceiling fans, tile floors, mirrored and marbled walls - most of which exist today - reflect the style of that era. Murals painted by an itinerant European artist are another interesting feature of the past. Major alterations and renovations of the premises and kitchen were completed in 1966, and the dining room was expanded in 1978 with the addition of the "1907" room.

Turn right and hike ¼ mile to the cave entrance. For a short but exciting time in the late 1930s, Bangor Cave was one of America's most exotic nightspots. A special spur to the cave, built by the Louisville & Nashville Railroad, brought thousands of elegantly dressed southerners to the cave's bungalow entrance. There, they waited outside for the chance to enter an underground Shangri-La. A lucky few, usually with bulging wallets, were allowed into the private casino hidden behind a heavily bolted door. Today there are only a few physical reminders of the cave's glory days: the outline of a fieldstone bar where a jar of thousand-dollar bills once sat on display, the concave area that served as an orchestra pit for swing bands and vocalists. But on the spot where diners once enjoyed $1.10 price-fixed meals and dancers swayed on tile-covered floors under a cathedral ceiling painted to resemble a night sky, only copperheads, spiders, and other creatures take advantage of the once-magnificent room. A sense of eeriness permeates the cavern's damp walls-a sense of stories never

Dadeville	C	DAM	Martin Dam and Lake	Near Dadeville off of Highway 50 in Elmore County on the Tallapoosa River. Martin Dam was the first of four dams constructed on the Tallapoosa River. When it was built, the dam created the world's largest artificial body of water, Lake Martin. Alabama Power Company began building Martin Dam in 1923. Although the majority of the lake is located in Tallapoosa County, the generating plant was built in Elmore County. The cost of the project was $20 million. The gates were closed on June 9, 1926 and the Tallapoosa River began to fill the small creeks and streams lacing the basin. Former residents watched with anguish as homes and fields which had been in their families for generations flooded. Old Indian sites were covered, burying many Native American artifacts under the rush of the water. At that time, Lake Martin was the world's largest artificial body of water. 4 generators producing 154.2 MW of power.

As Admiral Farragut's fleet of 14 frigates and four iron-clad monitors prepared to engage Forts Gaines and Morgan on August 5, 1864, Colonel Charles Anderson and his 800 Confederate troops were ordered to hold Fort Gaines at any cost. The Union monitor Tecumseh struck a torpedo and sank immediately. Seeing the screw propellers of the sinking Tecumseh turning in the air, Admiral Farragut bellowed, "Damn the torpedoes! Full speed ahead!" Immediately after gaining safety in Mobile Bay, Farragut's attention turned upon Fort Gaines. On August 8, Fort Gaines surrendered.

Florence	NW	DAM	Wilson Dam and Lake	Wilson Dam Road. Wilson Dam is a dam in east of Florence on Wilson Dam Road It impounds Wilson Lake. It is one of nine Tennessee Valley Authority (TVA) dams on the Tennessee River. The dam was declared a National Historic Landmark in 1966. Construction on Wilson Dam began in 1918 and was completed in 1927. The Wilson Dam actually predates the TVA, but was later placed under the authority of the TVA. The dam is 137 feet high and 4,541 feet across the Tennessee River. The cost to build the dam was almost $47 million. The main lock at Wilson Dam is 110 feet high by 600 feet long. The maximum lift is 100 feet. It is the highest single lift lock east of the Rocky Mountains. An auxiliary lock has two 60 feet deep by 300 feet long chambers that operate in tandem. The Shrine of the Most Blessed Sacrament, located (“in the middle of nowhere”) at Our Lady of the Angels Monastery in Hanceville, Alabama, is truly an amazing and awe-inspiring place. Located on 400 acres of lush farmland southeast of Cullman, the medieval-style monastery and the Shrine itself are a wonder one could hardly expect to experience outside of old World Europe, much less to find in the rural southeastern United States. In 1995, while visiting the Sanctuary of the Divino Nino Jesus in Bogotá, Columbia, Mother Angelica received a vision while praying before a small statue of the Divine Child Jesus. The statue came to life and said to her: "Build Me a Temple and I will help those who help you." Pilgrimages are available for groups of ten or more and individuals are welcome to join any scheduled activity at the Shrine. Out of respect for the Most Blessed Sacrament, the Nuns request that visitors refrain from wearing shorts, tank tops, sleeveless shirts or mini-skirts. Photographs are not allowed in the Shrine itself, as it may distract the Nuns and pilgrims at adoration.

				beautiful Lewis Smith Lake, which offers a 500-mile shoreline. Lewis Smith Dam which forms Smith Lake impounds the Sipsey Fork of the Black Warrior River. The amazing quality of the water in this lake is due to its location downstream of the Bankhead National Forest which filters water flowing into Smith Lake. The lake impounds 21,000 acres. The dam releases clear, cold water from the bottom of the lake. Because of these cold temperatures, the Sipsey Fork downstream of the dam can support introduced rainbow trout, making this section of water one of the only places in Alabama that can support a trout fishery.

Marion	SW	POI	Gateway Inn & Restaurant	1615 Highway 5 S. A tour of the Gateway Restaurant is an historical journey that displays the countless treasures of Marion and Perry County. The yard which is illuminated by one of the original street light from old downtown Marion houses the restaurant's front porch which is a creation of hand-made bricks salvaged from an aged Marion water tank. The braces that decorate the Gateway's front overhang were once part of the exterior of the Uniontown train station, while an arbor, once used to frame the cover of Judson's original indoor pool, has confederate jasmine climbing it's timbers. Inside the Gateway, architectural pieces from the Harwood-White house lead to the restaurant's main dining room and bar area. The pocket doors separating these two rooms are also from this house as well as all the interior doors through the Gateway. Adding to the restaurant's historical puzzle is the former Judson college music hall from which the beaded board ceiling and the large timbers supporting the roof structure in the lobby were taken. Petitions between the booths in the main dining room were built from interior doors that were saved from a renovation at Judson. A glassed area, adjacent to the bar, was created from the windows of a Marion Military Institute dorm that was remodeled, This, one of the most popular areas for dining, overlooks the MMI golf course. A study of several of the restaurant's floors reveals designs crafted from brick and stepping stones of an older Marion. Mirrors over the bar are surrounded by an antiquated

Marion	SW	POI	Marion Military Institute	1101 Washington Street Marion a school and college for young men, traces its origin back to 1842. During the Civil War, the Chapel and Lovelace Hall were used as Breckenridge Military Hospital, treating Confederate soldiers. These facilities still serve the college well. MMI operated as Howard College until 1887. The church then decided to move Howard College (which later became known as Samford University) to Birmingham, Alabama. Judson College, the Baptist women's college, remained in Marion. At the time of the move, the President of Howard College, Colonel James T. Murfee, along with some of the faculty and supported by several trustees, chose to remain on the old campus. Their intention was to operate a military school for young men. In 1887, they established Marion Military Institute, and a charter was granted in 1889 by the state of

Moulton	NW	EAT	Nesmith's Hamburgers	14396 Court St. Nesmith Hamburgers downtown on Court Street is the oldest hamburger joint in Moulton. Little has changed in the restaurant that the Nesmith family has owned since 1966. The owners refuse to talk about their "secret recipes," and if you have to ask how many calories a hamburger contains, do not bother eating one. The cooks fry them in a pan containing between 3 and 5 gallons of grease. The hamburgers are flattened in view of the customers, scooped up with a spatula and placed in the grease. Most of the frying pans hold about 36 hamburgers.

Paint Rock Valley	NE	POI	"The Walls of Jericho"	Located just north of Hytop on Highway 79. "The Walls of Jericho" is probably one of the most beautiful sites in Alabama. If you're up for a challenge, you should give it a try. "It is a long hike but if you are in decent condition and take it slow you can make it. Total distance is about 7 miles round trip. But it ain't on mall walk. It would be like starting on top of Monte Sano and hiking to the bottom. Then hike 3 or 4 miles on relatively flat-but rocky-trails. And finally, hike back up to the top of Monte Sano. You should allow 5-6 hours for the hike, wear hiking shoes, and bring 2 or 3 liters of water per person, and some snacks for fuel. "Walls of Jericho" was named for a bowl-shaped canyon of rock that shoots water out of holes and cracks in the rock wall during heavy rains." It is part of a 60,000-acre tract once owned by Texas oil baron Henry Lee Carter. When he died in 1977, the Walls of Jericho were sold and closed to visitors. The Walls of Jericho is now made up of 21,453 acres straddling the Tennessee-Alabama border. 4 or 2 wheeled vehicles are not allowed.

Phenix City	SE	POI	Fort Mitchell Open Mon - Sat. 10-5 Sunday 1-5.	560 Hwy 165. Today, the purpose of the reconstruction of Fort Mitchell, a National Landmark Site, is to bring to life that period of history that took place in this area during the time of the Federal Road, the Creek Indian War, and the pioneer settlement of this area. As Alabama became a state in 1819, the terms of the Battle of Horseshoe Bend were being carried out. The Federal Government had set up a Trading Factory at Fort Mitchell (1817-1820) to provide the Indians with necessary supplies such as clothing and food items. The factory was not successful and the Government set up an Indian Agency at Fort Mitchell, which remained there from 1825-1836, when the Indians were moved to the West. A Memorial can be seen just north of the forts Visitors Center, at the Indian Heritage Center, which has the names of each of the Indians who were moved to the West printed in the panels of the memorial. At the visitor's center upon your entrance to Fort Mitchell, you will need to check in. The Visitors Center houses the Museum, theatre, and a walk through time, where you will see displays depicting historical scenes and events of the area and time. There are collections of arrowheads, tools, guns, pottery, and household items. In the museum, is a display of period horse drawn carriages which are all original and built in the 1860 era.

Phil Campbell	NW	POI	Dismals Canyon	North of Hackleburg off of Hwy 43 at 300 County Road 8. On your next visit to NW Alabama, you need to go to the Dismals Canyon. Early settlers gave it the name as it was so forbidden to them. Basically it's a very rugged box canyon. Robbers of the Natchez Trace travelers hid there as well as Aaron Burr before he was captured near Mobile. Also some of the Indians (I forget which tribe, I think Choctaw) were held there in their "relocation" to Okalahoma in the infamous Trail of Tears. It is one amazing area. In fact the History Channel filmed part of "When Dinosaurs Roamed" in the canyon due to its primordial nature. Northern hemlock trees grow there as the temperature stays so much cooler that as the Ice Age receded the trees continued to flourish in the canyon.

Sheffield	NW	POI	FDR Monument. Site were FDR announced development of the TVA	SW corner of Montgomery Ave & E First St. On Jan. 21, 1933 Franklin Delano Roosevelt announced to an immense crowd at this crossing from his railroad car that he would approve development of the Tennessee River Valley and promised “to put Muscle Shoals back on the map”. He then toured the idle U.S. Nitrate Plant No. 2 and the Wilson Dam site with Senator George Norris. The new Congress approved Norris’s plans for development of the entire Tennessee River and FDR signed the Tennessee Valley Authority Act on May 18, 1933, thereby ending years of bitter controversy about the future of Muscle shoals district. The nitrate plants were given to TVA for development of fertilizers in peacetime and production of munitions in wartime. FDR returned Nov. 17 1934 to inspect the work underway by TVA at Wheeler Dam and Nitrate Plant No. 2 and again boarded his train in Sheffield. The TVA projects helped the area recover from the Great Depression, and power from the dams induced new industries to locate in the area.

Rube Burrow born in Lamar County Alabama December 11, 1854, went to Texas in 1872, where he became a cowboy. Few bandits in the south or southwest were so widely known from 1886-1890 as Rube. He would climb aboard the engine usually at night as it was pulling away from a station and force the engineer, at gunpoint, to stop the express car on solid ground, leaving the passenger car stranded on a trestle. By this method, Rube Burrow robbed so many trains that an engineer on the Texas & Pacific Line is said to have once asked "Where do you want me to stop this time?" and Rube replied "Same place". Rube was captured and in jail in Linden. He was killed outside the old Marengo courthouse trying to escape.

				an office for the family's wholesale gasoline business. Here you will find casual elegance in dining and an ambience-filled restaurant with two dining levels. The owner describes his cuisine as more "Creole than Cajun".
Wetumpka	SE	POI	The Bloom Family Home & Ashton Courthouse shown in the film, "Big Fish"	Looking up the hill at 402 East Bridge St., you will see the Bloom family home. The Ashton Courthouse in the film is actually the Elmore County Courthouse at 100 Commerce St. You also will find the site of the Horizon Savings & Loan bank robbery in Wetumpka.
Wetumpka	SE	DAM	Walter Bouldin Dam Jordan Lake Reservoir	Located NE of Wetumpka on Bouldin Dam Road. Walter Bouldin Dam was the last dam built as part of an Alabama Power project that developed the Coosa River. Bouldin Dam has the largest generating capacity of Alabama Power's 14 hydro facilities. It is unusual in design because it was built on a canal. Some people refer to it as the "plant built in a cornfield."
White Hall	SE	POI	Holy Ground Creek Battleground	Located 24 miles west of Montgomery off of Cr 40. Turn into the Holy Ground Battleground Park and turn left just beyond the guard building toward the picnic area. Look for the sign with Holy Ground Battlefield information and follow the walkway to the overlook. A commanding bluff overlooking the Alabama River near the small community of White Hall holds a significant place in Alabama history and legend. This was the site of Holy Ground, the town of Creek Prophet Josiah Francis and a base of operations for Red Stick warriors during the Creek War of 1813-1814. The noted Creek warrior William Weatherford is said to have made his famed horseback leap into the river from the bluff. Although it may have existed earlier, Holy Ground first attracted attention

				during the winter of 1812-1813 when Prophet Francis made it the headquarters for his rapidly expanding religious movement. A convert to the teachings of the Shawnee Prophet Tenskwatawa, Francis taught his followers that they should return to traditional ways and give up all aspects of white culture. When a civil war among the Creeks spilled over to the whites following the battles at Burnt Corn Creek and Fort Mims, the town at Holy Ground quickly became a target for attack. One of three U.S. armies converging on the Creek Nation left Fort Claiborne (today's Claiborne, Alabama) in December of 1813 and began a cross-country march to Holy Ground. Led by Gen. Ferdinand L. Claiborne, the troops emerged from the forests and attacked Holy Ground on December 23, 1813. Following their dramatic and bloody victory at Fort Mims, the Red Sticks were too confident in their abilities to deal with the soldiers and resistance quickly disintegrated as the tide of the Battle of Holy Ground began to turn against them. A detachment of warriors fought from behind fallen trees and logs to hold back Claiborne's men while Francis and the other leaders evacuated their non-combatants to safety across the Alabama River. In one of the memorable events of the day, the famed Creek warrior William Weatherford dashed to and fro on horseback, looking for an avenue of escape. According to Alabama legend, finding himself trapped by soldiers, he suddenly spurred his horse to a run and rode it off the top of the bluff in a sailing
